I think "agreement to ban" is too strong.

They are willing to consider (on a case by case basis) anyone who is convicted of a crime, consequences at the border, including trusted traveler implications and up to possible inadmissibility.

Here's what we've got:

The blockades are causing deeply concerning damage to our trade ties with the US, putting Canadian jobs at risk, and undoing hard won gains made under NAFTA. Elected officials in Michigan are already advocating for cutting Canada out of the auto manufacturing supply chain as a result.

Over the past few days, we have been in close touch with the White House, Department of Homeland Security and others in the US Administration.

We agree that these blockades are hurting families on both sides of the border, and they we must stand united against them.

This includes an agreement that will see anyone convicted of criminal activity surrounding the blockades banned from crossing the border.

It could also imperil privileges like NEXUS, FAST and other certifications.

Subject: DHS language

Importance: High

Hi Dom & Scott,

Mike is urgently looking for DHS language (PMO is pressing hard) re: agreement that anyone involved in blockages would be banned from entering US? Mike indicated you and your teams had a meeting on this?

Apologies, I do not have much line of site on this.

Many thanks,

C.
